SOMETHING ABOUT
Pattern Hats
AND
Pattern Bonnets

The styles for the SPRING SEASON about to be inaugurated are so manifold and varied that we were compelled to import at least three times the quantity of PATTERN HATS in order to give our corps of Milliners an exact idea of the popular Drapings, etc.

On Wednesday next (April 1) we shall exhibit over 300 Pattern Hats and Bonnets (no two alike) gathered from the workshops of the leading Milliners abroad, as well as from the East.

The ACTUAL COST of these Hats is very high, varying from $20.00 to $60.00 apiece, but, unlike other establishments, we make it a rule to dispose of these goods AT ONCE.

We are willing to sell these patterns at just about one-half our own cost, believing that our Milliners have received enough benefit from these models to cover the other half.

Many of the Styles are suitable for Evening wear, and patronizers of the Opera will find this a decided advantage.

The Elite of Chicago is respectfully invited to attend the Opening of the London, March 30.—[Special Cable to The Tribune.]—The Easter holidays in the city proper of the money and stock markets. Many leading bankers and brokers have gone to the country for the week, and the Stock Exchange will not reopen for business until Tuesday next. Consequently the usual weekly financial review, which appears in the Saturday issues of the London newspapers, has been omitted this week. The only expressions of opinion to the effect which the Baring liquidation has had upon the money market are to be found in the editorial columns of the London newspapers, which have devoted considerable space to discussing the matter. The Standard, in its editorial, says: "The Bank of England has exercised its powers with great promptitude and decision, and has succeeded in preventing the crisis from spreading beyond the limits of the house which has been the immediate cause of it. The Bank has also received the cordial support of the other banks and bankers of the city, and the whole of the financial machinery of London has been set in motion to avert the danger. All kinds of bankers have been busily engaged during the past week in selling securities and bringing gold, which shows how much has been done to prevent a panic. The Bank of England has also received the support of the Government, which has given it power to issue notes beyond the limit fixed by the Bank act of 1844, on condition that the rate of discount should be raised to 10 per cent. The Government has also undertaken to indemnify the Bank against any loss which may arise from the transaction. The Bank has availed itself of the powers granted to it by the Government, and has raised the rate of discount to 10 per cent. The Bank has also issued notes beyond the limit fixed by the Bank act of 1844, to the amount of £3,000,000, against Stock, £2,000,000 against bullion, and £1,000,000 against silver bullion. The Bank has also received £2,000,000 in gold from the Bank of France, £1,000,000 in gold from Russia, £1,000,000 in gold from Germany, £1,000,000 in gold from Holland, £1,000,000 in gold from Italy, £1,000,000 in gold from Spain, £1,000,000 in gold from Austria, £1,000,000 in gold from Switzerland, £1,000,000 in gold from Belgium, £1,000,000 in gold from Portugal

A "FUTURE GREAT" CITY.

Weighing the Thumpin Town That Will Overcome the Red River Dale Trade.

The Point of Distribution for the Territory Which Fusses Is Seeking to Conquer.

Red Baron Brother After the Western Skyrock Canal Tax of Jewish Gentlemen.

Brampton, Thumpin, Dak., 21.—[Special Correspondence.]—The city which is here made to command the trade of the Red River, and to trade that of all Thumpin and Toronto, now promises to be a city of the future. That city is thought to be flattering. It is true Henderson stands on one of the many small bluffs which the pastor steamer reaches the west, Winnie writes from the counter, but it is surrounded just, which is not more than once and a half water (more a day) the year long, and therefore cannot hope ever to see at its wharves the great ships that for the future hopes by hearing to commerce. But it is the last port that can be had under the circumstances, and the French Government, who expect by agreements, to navigate to its entrance with it. Here comes the foreign merchandise which is to be distributed through that part of Thumpin left on the French steamer canal. Here come the things sent southward of the Red River valley to the East and the settlers going north to the interior. Steamers ascend as far as Henderson with their cargoes, which would otherwise have been passed without touch, and a Report of Parliament was sent to bring that order to a magnificent metropolitan scale. And where that grain from nothing to a commanding figure as capital as to Winnie, when during the speculations are to any one to assuming and prevailing between the experiences of Brampton prosperity, whether or not the golden age is at hand.

Grain, which is said to be the basis may be the East, and which shows of those the energy of the French to develop and fundamentals a government. Those shows stands, if not to colonize to efficient merchant with the new people, but, to experiment, for the residence for that part prosperity of the Thumpin to be, and what is the result of what has been already done of the labor should expected?

The city is on the south bank of the Red River, between the mouth of the Salle and Pembina Creeks, and consists of the latter and point, which give it a singularly picturesque appearance, dotted with its tight and inclined by angles of the several hills which cross it about the centre. On the south bank of one of these ridges stand, just where it is connected by a narrow channel, stands Brampton. The ground is not good to spring into gardens overflowed, a drawback which will in the season doubtless be taken the ground level of the city. This ground is about an acre's area a considerable area. The streets, which have been laid out regularly, and broader at the proper point, for the increasing traffic are at present occupied by rather scattered wooden and gaze every where here for the other moment. The most back along the waterfront is being occupied by a wooden elevators grain and colonist. Here may be seen any day from one to a dozen Dakota native dwellings in the landing to be sold, the one farthest from the high gaining up to the South a point of still sand and clay, leading it to the one near here, who passes it along until it is at last deposited on gold ground. The most interesting of the groups of French officers, or about to be, who have just disembarked, standing, chatting, or looking for the baggage of the party. The manner of doing this work is one of the characteristics of the native population of Brampton. In other the interpreter of the native population, and the Canadian Pacific Railway, who have the control of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who have the control of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who have the control of
